

Charlotte Boardman

Private Lessons Post-COVID

A band enthusiast of eight years who plays three types of clarinets, Charlotte has found strength in music - being able to connect internally with their emotions has allowed them to build stronger relationships with others. Now, they've shared the power of music through their Gold Award by offering private music lessons. Charlotte gathered a team of other highly skilled high school band members to give free private lessons/master classes to local middle school students. After 12 years of Girl Scouting, Charlotte is ready to start their new musical journey at Northern Arizona University to major in music education and minor in Spanish.
