Ready to Include, Ready to Rally!

Girl Scout Cookie Rallies are where the adventure begins.

This Girl Scout Sparkables™ activity guide, created in partnership with Partake, helps Girl Scouts explore how thoughtful entrepreneurs make more cookie customers feel welcome. Through hands-on activities, Girl Scouts will learn about food allergies, practice customer conversations, and discover how one allergy-friendly cookie option can help more people partake in cookie season.

Say Cookies, Share Kindness: Create simple photo props to share about their cookie business and goals with a caregiver.

Allergy Awareness, Made Playful: Use a Food Allergy Awareness bingo card to ask friendly, respectful questions about food allergies, labels, and cross-contact.

Guide Girl Scouts through allergy-aware activities that build inclusion and confidence.

Ask me about allergy-friendly options!

Ask first. Share kindness.

I help every cookie fan feel welcome!

Food Allergy Fact or Myth Cards

Copy for Troop Leaders
☐ Myth: Food allergies are not that serious. Fact: Food allergies can be serious and even life-threatening.	☐ Myth: Food allergies only start when you are a kid. Fact: Food allergies can develop at any age.
☐ Myth: A tiny bite of an allergen will not hurt if you have food allergies. Fact: Even a trace amount of an allergen can cause a severe reaction for some people.	☐ Myth: If symptoms do not happen right away, the person is fine. Fact: Symptoms can appear within seconds, but they can also take up to two hours to show up.
☐ Myth: If a food looks safe, it is safe. Fact: Foods may appear harmless but can contain allergens so it is important to read labels and ask questions.	☐ Myth: Antihistamines, like Benadryl, can stop a serious allergic reaction. Fact: Antihistamines may help with some symptoms, but epinephrine (epi-pen, Neffy spray) is the medicine used to treat anaphylaxis. Anaphylaxis is a severe, rapid, and potentially life-threatening allergic reaction.
☐ Myth: Food allergies and food intolerances are the same thing. Fact: Food allergies involve the immune system. Food intolerances can be uncomfortable, but they are not the same as food allergies.	☐ Myth: Peanut allergy is always the most dangerous food allergy. Fact: No single food allergy is automatically more dangerous than another. Many foods can cause serious reactions.
☐ Myth: Every allergic reaction gets worse than the last one. Fact: Food allergy reactions can be unpredictable. A person may react differently each time.	☐ Myth: Cross-contact is not a big deal. Fact: Cross-contact matters. If an allergen touches a food that was otherwise safe, that food may no longer be safe for someone with that allergy.

Meet the Founder: Denise and Vivi

Denise Woodard founded Partake in 2016 after her daughter Vivi was diagnosed with several food allergies. She wanted to create delicious treats that more kids and families could enjoy together. Before Partake was sold in thousands of stores nationwide, Denise sold cookies out of her car and self-distributed just like a Girl Scout! What being the Founder & CEO of Partake has taught Denise is that inclusivity matters and ensuring everyone has a seat at the table is always a great business decision.

Vivi is a Girl Scout, too, which makes their story especially relevant during cookie season: Girl Scouts know that kindness, courage, and community can show up in everyday moments—even at a cookie booth.

Denise and Partake are proud to partner with Girl Scouts to create Girl Scout Sparkables™, allergy-friendly oatmeal chocolate chip cookies with colorful sprinkles that celebrate the spark within each of us and help more of us join in on the fun of cookie season.

Meet Denise

Denise Woodard is the founder & CEO of Partake Foods.

Meet Vivi

Vivi is Denise’s daughter and a Girl Scout.

The Big Idea

Denise wanted more families to share memorable moments safely.

The Mission

Partake makes allergy-friendly foods so more people can be included.

Girl Scout Connection

Cookie season is a chance to practice inclusion, courage, and customer care.

What Girl Scouts Can Do

Listen kindly. Check official allergen information. Ask an adult if you are not sure.

Allergy Awareness Bingo

Find someone who!

Girl Scouts move around the troop or rally group with a bingo grid and ask friendly, respectful questions about food allergies, labels, and inclusion. When a statement applies to someone, that person initials the square or places a sticker. The goal is to notice how many people have food allergies in their lives and practice asking, listening, and including with care.

Explore More Possibilities: Play as a troop mixer, station warm-up, or take-home conversation starter. For Daisy and Brownie Girl Scouts, use icons, stickers, or buddy readers. Remind girls: only share what feels comfortable, use first names or initials only, and it is always okay to pass.

Share only what feels okay.
Use first names or initials. You can always pass.

How Allergens Can Move

Food allergies matter. Sometimes an allergen can move from one food, hand, or surface to another. This is called cross-contact. In this activity, glitter or shaving cream stands in for an allergen so Girl Scouts can see how easily it can travel.

Supplies:

- Instructions
- Washable glitter or shaving cream
- Paper towels
- Soap/water or wipes
- Disposable table covering
- Sample props such as a: marker, popsicle stick, box, paper

1 Put a small amount of glitter or shaving cream on one volunteer's hands.

2 Ask her to pick up the marker or popsicle stick.

3 Look for glitter on the objects and hands.

4 Hand the object to a friend.

5 Talk about what happened: allergens can cling and move too.

6 Clean hands and surfaces.

Girl Scout Takeaway:

I will not guess. I will help customers check official allergen information.

Accuracy note: Adapted from FARE Food Allergy Myths and Facts. Do not add medical claims beyond approved source language. Encourage checking official allergen information and asking an adult.

Find-a-Word

Food allergies are important to understand because, for someone with food allergies, coming into contact with even a small amount of that allergen can make someone have a reaction. In this activity, Girl Scouts will search for the Top 9 major food allergens hidden in the puzzle on the next page.

As you find each word, think about how a thoughtful cookie entrepreneur can help customers feel welcome, safe, and included. Remember: we do not guess about allergies. We help customers check labels, packaging, and official allergen information.

Girl Scout Challenge

After you finish the word search, choose one allergen from the list and practice this customer-friendly response:

“Oh, you’re allergic to [insert top 9 food allergen here]. Did you know we now have a super yummy, allergy-friendly cookie? It’s made in a Top 9 allergen free facility. Let’s check the package or official allergen information together.”

Set My Inclusion Goal

Inclusion starts with me.

Girl Scouts know that small choices can help others feel welcome. In this activity, Girl Scouts will set their inclusion goal and write it on a bracelet they can wear as a reminder during cookie season and beyond.

An inclusion goal is not about selling a certain number of packages. It is about how each Girl Scout wants to show kindness, care, and courage in her own way. Maybe she wants to help a friend feel included, remember to ask before sharing food, speak up when someone needs support, or make sure every customer feels welcome at the cookie booth.

Each Girl Scout will choose a short phrase or promise that feels true to her, write it on a bracelet, and decorate it with colors, words, and symbols that remind her what inclusion means.

What will your inclusion goal be?

Ask Girl Scouts to think about one way they can help others feel welcome, safe, and included.

They can complete one of these prompts:

I will include others by _____.

I can help someone feel welcome by _____.

I can be a kind cookie entrepreneur by _____.

My inclusion goal is _____.

- Ask first
- No guessing
- Include everyone
- Everyone belongs
- Make room
- Share safely
- Be kind
- Kindness counts
- Check the label
- Welcome all
- Help others feel welcome
- Listen with care

Explore More Possibilities

Invite Girl Scouts to share their bracelet phrase with a buddy or troop volunteer. Then ask: “How can we practice these inclusion goals at our cookie booth, at school, at home, or with friends?”

Girl Scouts can also make a second bracelet to give to someone who helps them practice inclusion.

Supplies

- Markers or crayons
- Scissors
- Glue or tape

Instructions

1. Think about what inclusion means to you.
2. Choose one personal inclusion goal.
3. Write your goal or reminder phrase on your bracelet.
4. Decorate the bracelet with colors, symbols, or drawings that make it feel like yours.
5. Cut out the bracelet and tape it around your wrist.
6. Wear it as a reminder to help others feel welcome during cookie season.
